Happy Thanksgiving (soon) and Happy Birthday to me!

Yep, today is my special day, and one of my favorite holidays, no turkey required. My sweet daughter even went around school last week perpetuating the myth that she and her friends have a week off to celebrate me, not Thanksgiving. I don't think they bought it. She doesn't really believe it either. But I appreciate the lie, especially after a fall filled with failed trips, coronavirus and a hospitalization.

Good times to say the least.

I am thankful for God keeping me afloat

A Quick Update & Some Fun

In case you weren't aware, Covid wreaked its chaos in my home and sent my hubby to the hospital for ten excruciatingly long days, but praise the Lord, he's home! In the midst of the madness we have been supremely blessed by the multitude of offers for meals, prayers and well wishes. I am so thankful for friends, family and bookish buddies! I am thankful for YOU!

And I'm showing my appreciation with a giveaway.

Next month I'll be doing a drawing for a $20 Amazon Gift Card open only to my newsletter subscribers (that's you!). Entering is easy, simply reply to this email and let me know the title of a fictional book you are thankful for and why. I've included a few of my latest below.

Happy Reading!

Book Recommendations

What I've been reading in between efforts to disinfect my house. Enjoy!

The True Lies of Rembrandt Stone Series by David James Warren

This is a six book series, the last of which releases today (happy birthday to me!). I read the first five after my horrific Covid headache cleared and they were perfect, short, fast-paced reads that helped distract me from the stress of being apart from my hubby. The protagonist is former detective Rembrandt Stone, a family man haunted by a number of cold cases. When he's given a second chance to make things right everything else in his life goes wrong, but then that happens a lot when folks time travel to the past and back again. Totally recommend this genre-bending series!

The California Dreamin' Series by Kristin Canary

I've read the two books released so far which just so happen to have been my first Rom-Coms ever. Oh. My. Goodness. In the midst of a heavier season of life these lifted my spirits so much. I legitimately laughed out loud multiple times. Snark, sass and swoon - what a combination! While these aren't Christian Fiction books they are written by a dear friend/woman of faith, and are pretty darn clean and thoroughly entertaining. If you like kissing scenes and need a laugh I suggest you start here!

The Unblemished Trilogy by Sara Ella

I haven't read these books yet, but they're being released in paperback December 14th and you can bet I'm snapping them up. Technically they are young adult, maybe I'll read them with my daughter, maybe not. But I had to share with you now because if you've got teenaged readers at home you need to add these books to your cart ASAP. Sara is a phenomenal writer who blends faith, fantasy and fairy-tales in truly epic fashion. Grab the hardcovers or kindle editions if you don't want to wait.

Well friends... I think that's it for me, but I can't wait to hear what books you are thankful for! I'll send out a reminder email once I have a deadline for the giveaway, so keep your eyes peeled for more information!
